Godparents

- Children normally have at least three godparents. At least two of them have to be of the same sex as the infant and one has to be of the opposite sex. If it proves impossible for there to be three godparents it is possible for a baptism to take place with one godfather and one godmother.
- Godparents can be other family members or friends. Parents can be godparents to their own children providing there is at least one other godparent as well.
- It is important that you choose people who will take an interest in the child's spiritual welfare and who will pray for you and the child. Godparents must themselves be baptized and preferably confirmed.
